Your classic board games are probably collecting dust on your bookshelf (except for the games for two people that have now been overplayed by you and your partner), and maybe you have been working on one of the most challenging jigsaw puzzles by yourself at the kitchen table. Regardless, we all miss board game nights and are patiently waiting until it's safe enough to gather in someone's living room again. But why wait? We have technology! And technology allows us to play online board games with friends right from the comfort of our own home. Grab some snacks, brush up on some mild trash talk, and get ready for a fun virtual evening with the crew over some of the best board games out there. via playingcards.ioPlay NowA true crowd favorite! Although it has been adapted and modernized, Backgammon is one of the oldest known board games that have stood the test of time. Two players each have 15 pieces that they have to move between 24 triangles of alternating colors on the board according to the numbers rolled on the dice. If you haven't already played before, the board may look intimidating, but the game is a lot less complicated than it looks and certainly a fun one to try out.RELATED: Best-Reviewed Board Games to Play While in Self-Quarantine via apps.apple.comPlay NowOf all the online board games, this one is for the serious gamers to show off the skills they have accumulated after spending hours hunched over this game building settlements and armies. Now we can all play it through our screens. Just gather a few people into the virtual room and type the evening away. via apps.apple.comPlay NowWe all have that one friend that gets overly competitive about Scrabble. If you can't think of one, then it's probably you. Similar to Boggle, this one is also for vocabulary experts and is definitely more of a widely known game. There are an endless number of strategies to read about online to beat this game, but mostly we'd say to brush up on the lesser-known words in the dictionary to really throw your opponent's off.RELATED: 30 Little-Known Words That Will Help You Win Scrabble via apps.apple.comPlay NowReady to go to college and be a lawyer? Or maybe you want to just jump right to filling your car with children and building a home? Regardless, you and your friends will embark on a wild journey of making decisions, handling money, and watching life zip right by you. The online version of this classic board game looks relatively similar to the original—and ultimately just as fun. via apps.apple.comPlay NowI'll be the first to admit that I always think of the classic The Beatles song when I see this game title, but the game is just as addicting as the tune. Players set off on a railway escapade and whoever is the fastest at connecting cities by train tracks to reach the final destination is declared the winner. Develop your strategy, block your competitors' trains, and dominate routes before your opponents do, all while virtually traveling the world. via codenames.gamePlay NowBeware of the assassin! For this game, you and your friends will divide into two teams. The teams compete to see who will be able to contact all of their agents first, but the catch is that you can only use one word at a time.RELATED: The 20 Best Road Trip Games to Play via playtaboo.comPlay NowTrickier than it seems, Taboo is all about getting your pals to guess the word on your card without using the other words listed that are commonly used to describe that word. You'll really have to dig into your creative brain to get people guessing and in my experience, the game usually takes a turn for the humorous. The best part is, there isn't a limit so you can play with as few or as many people as you would like! via letsplayuno.comPlay NowUNO is arguably the best card game in existence, and if you haven't played it before, it's probably the easiest game on this list to learn. Players have to match a card in their hand with the number or color of the current card that is lying face-up on the deck. The first person to dispose of all their cards is crowned the winner. The deck is also riddled with special action cards including wild cards, skip cards, and reverse cards that make the game a little more competitive. via randomwordgenerator.comPlay NowWhile this one will require some sort of video call, this online generator will produce words that can be used for Pictionary. You can select easy, medium, or hard, for an endless number of words that will keep you entertained for hours. All you need is some sort of material to sketch on and a drawing utensil. We would recommend a dry erase board and markers. Pro tip: This game is more fun when no one knows how to draw.Now that you have scouted out the best online board games for game night, exercise your mind in preparation with the best brain games to boost your brain power. Originally Published: March 07, 2021 "Ouija" may technically be a trademarked game, but the term is often used to refer to any talking board or spirit board. The boards, marked with all letters of the alphabet, the numbers 0 through 9, and a few simple words allow users to take turns asking questions from members of the spirit world. Players all place a finger or two on the planchette—a gliding plastic or wood piece with a viewing hole—and the spirits move it to spell out words or phrases on the ouija board. These boards go way back. Versions of them have even been traced back to ancient China and eventually made its way to America where it became quite popular by the 1900s. An American businessman patented the planchette, which was sold with a ouija board, in 1890. Several studies attest to the ouija board's accuracy and many say it isn't so, but there's only one way to find out if the spirit world connection is real. Make one yourself! For those interested in creating their own unique ouija board, you're in luck—they're very simple to make and you just need a few low-cost supplies. You can add your own creativity to the board too, making it uniquely you. Many ouija boards are adorned with images like moons, stars, and suns. The Spruce / Lauren Murphy Wooden surface Acrylic paint Paint brush Pencil Paint pen Alphabet and numeral stencil Planchette (we used a wooden letter "O") The Spruce / Lauren Murphy Before you begin, it can be helpful to draw guidelines for where you will place the letters and numbers on your ouija board. For this step, use a pencil. That way you can erase it. If you have a straight-edge handy, use that to ensure you have perfectly straight lines. You can also use the edge of your stencil if needed. Draw a vertical line connecting the center points on the top and bottom sides of your wood. Then, draw a horizontal line connecting the center points of the sides. The exact center of your workspace will be right where those two lines intersect. As you are stenciling your letters and numbers, these guidelines will help you determine proper spacing. If you are curving your letters or numbers, you can also draw your curved line guidelines. The Spruce / Lauren Murphy Choose your favorite color (Tip: using red paint will make your ouija board look even spookier). Use your paint brush to stencil on your letters. You will need to move the stencil after every application, so be careful not to apply the paint too heavily or the stencil will stick. Between every letter and number, gently blow on the paint so it can dry well enough before you move on to the next one. Otherwise, it may smudge. If you feel confident, you could even skip the stencil and draw your letters and numbers by hand. Stenciling is the easiest option for those less artistic folks. Stickers may create a discrepancy in the texture of the board—you want your ouija board to be relatively flat so the spirits can guide the planchette smoothly. Alternately, you can use printable letters and transfer paper: The Spruce / Lauren Murphy Finish your DIY ouija board off by adding words in the four corners of the board. Traditional ouija boards say "yes" and "no" as well as "hello" and "goodbye." The easiest way to do this is to use a paint pen. This way, you can place your words easily and have better control over how they turn out. If you don't have a paint pen, you can use any other marker to draw the words yourself, or use acrylic paint and freehand designs. The Spruce / Lauren Murphy Allow your paint to dry for a couple of hours or, preferably, overnight before using the planchette on its surface. For a planchette, we used a wooden letter "O." Planchettes must have a viewing hole so you can see what letter, number, or word the spirits want to communicate. Ready to connect with your passed loved ones? This is your tool. You can also use a clear glass like a shot glass or a DIY wood piece if you're handy. Add felt circles to the bottoms to make your planchette slide easier if needed. Invite over your pals for a spooky night of connecting with the spirit world. Place your fingers on the planchette, ask a question, and let the spirits do the rest.
